Monday morning blues

Friday saw the release of the University of Michigan's consumer sentiment survey, which increased to a 5-month high of 59.5 in September, which was up on August's 58.2 but lower than forecasts at 60.0. And if you thought that at least things can only get better, I'd hold that thought after shipping giant FedEx announced that it was pulling its earnings guidance due to "expectations for a continued volatile operating environment."

In other releases, Eurozone core inflation rose 0.7% in August, and 5.5% on the year, which was bang inline with forecasts, UK retail sales sank -1.6% in August, which was the biggest decline so far this year, while Chinese retail sales jumped 5.4% as industrial production increased 4.2%, with both releases out-performing expectations!

Friday also saw RBA Governor, Philip Lowe, announce, "Inflation has very quickly gone from being too low, to being too high."

Growth in labour costs remains consistent with inflation returning to target while medium-term inflation expectations have remained well anchored. The cash rate should at least average 2.5% over time and will likely cycle between 2.5 and 3.5%! We are closer to normal on rates but not there yet. At some point, it will be appropriate to slow the rate of increase in interest rates, and the case for doing that becomes stronger as the level of interest rates increases."

Meanwhile, in New Zealand, a couple of the local banks have raised their OCR forecasts, with one suggesting it will peak at 4.75%! Meanwhile manufacturing PMIs reached their highest level since July 2021 at 54.9.

In slightly concerning news, CNN reported that President Xi has told his military he wants China to have capability to take Taiwan by 2027, while Saudi Arabia and Russia see USD100 as a fair price for oil. How convenient! Meanwhile, Goldman Sachs have followed Fitch and become way more pessimistic with their forecasts as a "higher rates path, combined with a recent tightening in financial conditions, implies a somewhat worse outlook for growth and employment next year."

And why are Goldman Sachs saying this, I hear you ask? Probably because, once again, equity markets spent a week in full retreat as inflation fears intensified and short-term bond yields reached levels last seen in 2007. The US 2-year bond yield is now at an incredible 3.86%, while the 10-year bond is at 3.45%.

Meanwhile, verbal intervention, and the odd price check from the BoJ, has capped the USD/JPY below the 145.00 level, although the USD made further gains reaching a 2 year high against the CNH while it rose to levels not seen since 1985 against GBP! However, there was positive news — European natural gas prices plummeted on EU emergency plans, which saw the EUR/USD firm back to parity.

This week ...

... starts with the Japanese 'Respect for the Aged Day' so let's just leave that one there, okay all?

We also have three G7 central bank meetings this week with the Fed, the BoJ, and the BoE. The market is pricing in a 20% possibility the Fed will hike by 1.00%! In addition, Japan and Canada report the latest inflation and PMI prints.
