While the data was mixed ...

... financial markets had a substantial 'risk-off' session after US President Joe Biden forgot the golden rule of war ... don't tell them what you're going to do! When asked whether the US would support an Israeli strike on Iranian oil facilities, President Biden confirmed, "We're discussing that. I think that would be a little - anyway" adding, "nothing's going to happen today." This saw oil futures spike 5.4% and the USD-index and US Treasury yields surge higher, while equity markets sold off.

Breaking it all down, the USD-index broke through resistance to reach a 6-week high at 101.95, which saw the EUR, AUD and NZD all fall with the NZD the worst performer dropping -0.8%. This saw the NZD/AUD drop to the 0.9075 level, the GBP was also sold after BoE Governor Andrew Bailey stated the central bank may become "a bit more activist" i.e. aggressive, in cutting rates if news on inflation remains good, while the Yen strengthened on the crosses after Japanese Chief Cabinet Secretary Hayashi confirmed, "PM Ishiba didn't request any special policy from BoJ Governor Ueda when they met at their Wednesday meeting."

Former Fed member Bill Dudley announced, "I was too pessimistic about the risks of a so-called hard landing. With a soft landing, the Fed would presumably move policy to neutral, not accommodative. In a soft-landing scenario, I'd expect the Fed Funds rate to bottom out no lower than 3.50%." This saw US Treasury yields gap higher with the 2 and 10-years firming 6bps to be at 3.71% and 3.85% respectively, while the Andrew Bailey comment saw the UK markets price in a stronger cutting cycle with a full 25bps cut priced in for November, with the odds further 25bps cut in December increasing from 40% to 70%.

The surging oil price supported all of the energy commodities, while steel also had a strong session rallying 6.8%, although copper prices fell -2.2%. Finally, as has been the trend over the last few days, equity markets were all lower, falling -0.5% to -1.5%.

Breaking the data down ...

US services PMIs surged from 51.5 to 54.9 in September, which was a lot higher than forecasts at 51.7, while initial jobless claims rose by 6k to 225k, which saw continuing claims ease by 1k to 1,826k. New manufacturing orders eased by -0.2% from the prior month to USD590.4bn, while Fed member Austin Goolsbee suggested, "As the dockworkers strike was predicted, retailers have been stockpiling, they have about 2 weeks of stuff, after that we will start to see more of an effect."

Eurozone producer prices increased 0.6% on the month following July's downwardly revised 0.7%, while Japanese PMIs were finalised lower at 53.1 for services, 49.6 for manufacturing, with the composite at 52.0

The Australian August trade surplus exceeded expectations reaching AUD5.64bn verse the forecast AUD5.50bn, although it unchanged from July's downwardly revised figure. Meanwhile the final September PMIs were confirmed at 46.7 for manufacturing, 50.6 for services, with the composite at 49.6 "confirming sluggish economic growth, similar to the initial flash release."

The NZ commodity price index firmed 1.8% in September, although in NZD terms the index fell 0.2% as the NZD lifted 1.0%.

Following last week's Chinese stimulus package, Nomura Bank warned, "What has happened in the past week has already reminded us of the epic bubble and burst in 2015. China's current economic fundamentals are still weak, a more sober assessment is required."

While this day will be known as the day the Germany re-united in 1990, for me, the German reunification was all about the New Years eve party when David Hasselhoff sang 'Looking for Freedom' from the Berlin wall!
